MONDAY MORNING, JAN. [illegible]0, 18[illegible]2

What has been done in Seven Months

Some eight months ago, all the arrangements for the event having been made, the great conspiracy of the South [illegible] aristocracy bloomed out into open rebellion. On the 12th of April the insurgent Davis commanded that fire upon our flag and faithful guards in Fort Sumter, which awoke a nation to its peril. It was a memorable day for Americans and those who experienced its anxious hours will hand down to their children a story which has no parallel in history.

A little more than a half year has past since then. The 12th of April found the nation utterly and pitiably disarmed, and our crafty enemies armed at all points. The conspirators had diligently used their great opportunities. The sworn servants of the nation had robbed its arsenals of three hundred thousand muskets, its treasury of six million dollars, had dispersed our navy and the most faithful among its officers on the most distant seas, had sent our small arms to the farthest frontier lines, had placed the most important military posts in the hands of traitors like Twiggs. They had deliberately destroyed our credit abroad and at home, and having in every way tied the people hand and foot, these audacious aristocrats proceeded to revenge themselves for their first political defeat. They believed themselves secure, they had prepared their masked batteries, they beheld already twenty-nine million of people meekly submitting to three hundred and forty thousand pampered, labor hating aristocrats. They played a great game—and they have lost it.

Let us review the months which have passed since the day of Sumter, and see what we have done. Seven months ago we had not seven hundred soldiers within reach of a defenceless capital. To-day we have probably two hundred thousand armed men on the line of the Potomac, and another hundred thousand in the west, another hundred thousand in and about Kentucky, and another army in the centre of the rebellion. Seven months ago we had not arms to put into the hands of seventy-five thousand volunteers; to-day we have muskets, cannon, every supply in abundance for four times the number. Seven months ago we could neither feed nor move an army of five thousand men; to-day every department of our vast military organization is completed and we can make war across the continent. Seven months ago we had not a dozen ships of war at hand; to-day we number our navy by the hundred, and are guarding a coast line of more than two thousand miles.

Seven months ago the government could scarcely borrow a few hundred thousands at twelve per cent; to-day twelve millions of people lend it fifty millions of dollars at [illegible]. Seven months ago the question was whether the people would support the government; to-day the only question is whether the government will support the people.

It is no slight work to have done in seven months. An army of three hundred thousand men is recruited, organized, and the commissary supply, transportation and hospital stores are prepared and collected in the vast quantities required, all departments are systematized, and a people till now curiously ignorant of war, look with just pride upon labors which the most warlike nation of Europe has never achieved in the same short time.

In these seven eventful months there have been many days of deep discouragement—almost of despair; days—like that of Bull Run—when our women wept bitter tears of shame at the disgrace of their sons and brothers; days when efficient treason looked triumphant[ly] down upon helpless loyalty. The people have been impatient, and sometimes ill-judging. They have rashly condemned, and as rashly praised. They have demanded impossibilities and rejoiced over trivialities. Because hours seemed days, we have looked for a year's work done in a month. But as fault-finding needs even less judgment than indiscriminate praise, we need not wonder that trivial losses have been magnified into disastrous defeats while half-successes have made heroes who [illegible] with [illegible] the [illegible].

But while [illegible] the [illegible] have [illegible] people that they [illegible] of temper they have [illegible] turned the [illegible] upon the [illegible] and the [illegible] with [illegible] party [illegible] the [illegible] and traitors in [illegible].

Looking back and surveying the field [illegible] we find [illegible] only for pride and [illegible] judgment. Our preparations [illegible] a scale as vast as the continent—are [illegible] nearly completed; the complex and novel [illegible] of our great [illegible] work smoothly; we have even achieved in a few months what England did not manage in double the time. We have the right men in the right places and the nation feels confident that those to whom its most important interests and the lives of its soldiers are entrusted, are capable, faithful and energetic.

To the events of the next seven months we may, therefore, look forward with daily brightening hopes, and ere the anniversary of the fall of Sumter we have a right to expect to see that flag again waving over the fortress and the bay of Charleston, which there suffered its first humiliation; we have a right to expect within the coming seven months, that the stars and stripes will flaunt from Southern fortresses and cities, where it has been struck down by traitors.

More Treason

True to its instincts our secession neighbor in his issue of the 17th inst., boldly avows itself in favor of compromise. What kind of compromise is desired is not apparent from its definition. But those familiar with the course of his party in Oregon and elsewhere, cannot fail to infer correctly what kind of compromise is desired, and with whom. It means no more, says the editor, than "the Union and the constitution as our fathers made it and the laws as they interpreted them." The boast of the Breckinridge Peace party, soon after the Jeff Davis constitution was issued, was that that was the old federal constitution with its compromises. Jeff Davis invited all the non seceding States, except New England, to rally under his constitution. Numbers of Oregon sympathizers united with Ben Stark, in declaring that the Confederate constitution embodied the true scope and spirit of the old constitution, with its guarantees and compromises as held by the followers of the Republic and [illegible] propounded by the leaders of the Democracy, and they also asserted that to its adoption substantially, if not in form, must they come before the Union could be restored.

This then is the kind of compromise desired [illegible] an adoption of the Jeff Davis constitution, or as the acts of the peace party [illegible], and as the article implies, a recognition of the Southern Confederacy. Now, when dangers thicken around the Republic—when European powers threaten war [illegible] they evidently desire to make it [illegible] find, pretexts to justify intervention, this [illegible] sheet hastens with alacrity to put itself on the side of domestic and foreign enemies and talks of compromise. This perverse traitor, who has again and again taken the oath of allegiance to the United States, who was born beneath the stars and [illegible], who has received more money from the United States treasury than from any other source, now [illegible] compromise with rebels in arms!

What! compromise with monsters whose hands are red with the blood of the best and bravest of [illegible]? Compromise with wretches who [illegible] government of liberty and law, ask our people to assist them in their nefarious purposes? Great God in Heaven! has it come to this?

And when would this mean traitor compromise? Now, when the enemy is thundering at the gates of the capitol, and when the thrones of power are menacing the country. In what way would he compromise, but by base submission to armed [illegible] and traitors, and foreign dictation, and acknowledging that base born offspring of hell, the Southern Confederacy? No, sir! no!—Peace Democrats! a thousand times never! not if every State becomes a field of martial strife, and the last peace democrat must be fought, hand to hand, on loyal soil.

The width of the Willamette river, as measured on the ice, is 1178 feet, or a little over a quarter of a mile.

THE ARMED [illegible] IN MOUNTAINS [illegible] RECONNOISSANCE.—The balloon department of the army [illegible] Potomac is becoming one of considerable importance. [illegible] the [illegible] Marshall, [illegible] having [illegible] [illegible] regularly [illegible] Here [illegible] [illegible] when [illegible] [illegible] rise to a height of [illegible] miles, when in full view a [illegible] of which [illegible] in the direction of Maryland, thus passing over to Washington [illegible] possibly. This [illegible] the most important aerial reconnoissance [illegible].

GOV. WM. PICKERING.—This gentleman has been appointed Governor of Washington Territory. He is a citizen of Illinois, born in England, and emigrated to that State some thirty years ago, with a large number of wealthy and intelligent families. These families settled in the counties Edwards and Wabash, and their descendants are among the best citizens of the country.

Gov. Pickering is a well educated man—a gentleman of the old school in his manners, [illegible] affable and agreeable. He will make a popular and good Governor for Washington Territory. We commend him to the confidence of the citizens of that Territory.

CANAL ROUND THE FALLS.—The city council of Oregon City, on Monday of last week, granted the right of way to sundry citizens of the upper country for building a canal, to be constructed around the Falls at that city. This is the first step—the second will be to obtain the capital to construct the work, and the next to do the work. It is intimated that the State prison convicts would be employed with advantage in making the excavations for the canal.

HOUSEBREAKING.—The Argus says that on the night of the 7th three men broke into the saddler's shop of Mr. Ferguson, at Lafayette and carried off some $300 worth of work. The thieves were caught, and the stolen property found. One found security to appear at court—two were put into jail, from whence they made their escape after two days confinement.

CITY.

The Weather — Storms on the River and its Accidents. —Having but few local items to offer of any interesting and important news on account of which the country [illegible] it [illegible] proper to give our readers [illegible] of which we [illegible] cognizant. [illegible] was occupied by [illegible] young [illegible] amusement [illegible] within [illegible] Willamette [illegible] Sleighing was the most prominent [illegible] horses [illegible] other side. We also noticed Mr. Wm. [illegible] of the publishers of the [illegible] [illegible] sleigh, which [illegible] large blanket spread for a sail as a means of propelling it. He no doubt perceived the novel idea of locomotion at the time [illegible] the Oak [illegible] "whale." We heard of no serious accidents which befel any one during the day, save the accidental [illegible] of a few delicate skaters on the ice, which was done, no doubt, "Sparta[illegible]" for the purpose of hardening their flesh. After dark, the few remaining parties on the ice were startled by the cry of "help, help," occasionally intermixed with "God verdamn, [illegible] home." It was soon discovered that a Mr. Johns, who resides on the east side of the river where he keeps a tannery, had fallen into one of the many air holes which abound on the river, while on his way home. By means of ropes and planks he was extricated from his precarious situation, when he left for home, leaving behind his hat and handkerchief as mementoes and warnings to passing skaters. Yesterday, Mr John Collins also received a considerable of a ducking while exhibiting his skill and agility on a pair of skates.

An Accident and Mixture of Notable Politicians. —Many of our readers perhaps have not been aware that our city has been honored the last week past by the presence of quite a number of "notables," residents of Salem, Corvallis and Eugene City, the most of whom had become tired of the many pleasures which they enjoyed during their stay, or their money having given out, we do not know which, concluded to engage a four horse team and sleigh, wherewith they started early yesterday morning for their respective homes, accompanied by an ex Judge and now a prominent attorney,—but lo, and behold! when about one mile from town, while passing Mr Fields' tannery, the driver deposited the load in one of the vats, from which cause he broke the tongue of the sleigh, and was compelled to return to town to repair. Our readers may imagine the astonishment of Mr. Fields when he arrived at the scene, and Mr. B., the editor and politician Mr Joe H——l, the bosom friend and political adviser of Gov. Whiteaker, the ex Judge and politician, as also an Indian Agent under the present regime, all trying to tan themselves in one and the same vat. After they extricated themselves, all started on foot to this place for another bottle of refreshments, with which they went on their way rejoicing yesterday afternoon.

Bad Practice. —We have noticed the practice of many of our ladies taking their "little darlings" to the churches theatre and public lectures, which, on account of their crying is a great annoyance to the audience. We therefore respectfully request that in future they will leave them at home.

Honor to whom Honor is due. —To a young man named Duffy, the son of an honest laborer, in this city, belongs the credit of rescuing two men from watery graves during the past two days. Mr W. L. McEwan was also a timely assistant on Saturday night.

Made Secure. —The steamer Mountain Buck, sunk by the ice a few days ago at the O. S. N. Co.'s shipyard, has been well secured against damage when the ice breaks up, by means of strong hawsers, and by cutting the ice around her.

Miners' Buckskin Gloves, Mittens, and Gauntlets. —The glove establishment in St Louis, which obtained for their work the highest premium at the World's Fair, and at several State fairs, has a branch of their establishment at Aurora, in this State, where all the articles named are manufactured in a superior manner. These are for sale by Harker & Bros. The money paid for these gloves, gauntlets and mittens, goes to establish a home manufacture of great value—and besides, secures an article that can be depended upon.

Moderating. —The weather is moderating. Yesterday sleet fell freely, and last night there were some indications of its turning to rain.

Experience having proved that simple remedies often act speedily and certainly when taken in the early stages of the disease, recourse should at once be had to Brown's Bronchial Troches, or Lozenges, let the Cold, Cough, or Irritation of the Throat be ever so slight, as by this precaution a more serious attack may be effectually warded off. And Nine-Pins set, like systems, up
To be knocked down the following minute;

Like sinners old or politicians,
That turn about with every shake,
In hopes to better their condition;
Tetotums we've for patriots got,
Who court the mob with antics humble
Like theirs the patriot's dizzy lot,
